

III CEIMAR International Summer School on Estuarine and Nearshore Systems: From Fundamentals to Cutting-Edge Knowledge

June 5th - June 17th, 2016

To be held in Granada, Spain

Organized by the University of Granada (Spain), the Utrecht University (The Netherlands) and the International Campus of Excellence of the Sea (CEIMAR)

<http://gdfa.ugr.es/summerschool16>

Information document:
From Málaga Airport to Granada

From Málaga Airport to Granada

There are mainly two ways for coming to Granada from the Malaga Airport:

- The first one consists of taking the direct bus from the airport. This link redirects you to the website with the necessary information to book it. The schedule is limited to certain hours, with a discontinuous service from 8:30 to 20:45. It is almost indifferent whether to reserve it or not, there are available seats normally. Nevertheless, if your arrival is late at evening, it is recommended to buy it beforehand.
- The second option consists of going to Malaga and then taking the bus from the bus station. The best choice is taking the train from the Malaga Airport to the train station at the Malaga centre called María Zambrano. The airport's train station is opened from 6.20 to 23.20. There is one train every 20 minutes, and the route takes around ten minutes, with a price of  $\sim 2$  €. No reservation is required for the train. The bus station is 5 minutes far from the train station. The buses are more continuous, with a service from 7:00 to 22:00. As in the previous item, the ticket should be bought beforehand if the arrival is late at night.

The general suggestion is checking the timetables of the Malaga Airport-to-Granada's bus. If the alternatives do not suit you, then take the train to Malaga and head for the Malaga's bus station, with more frequent incoming buses to Granada. Usually, no reservation is needed but for last minute buses, since it is recommended to ensure a seat by booking the ticket beforehand.